CEHS principal pens letter to families, adds context

Recent widely reported stories were initially sparked by notes left in a bathroom at Cape Elizabeth High School. These led to state, national, and then international media coverage and vast amounts of speculation on social media. After extensive investigation, CEHS Principal Jeffrey Shedd sent a letter to the families of students in order to provide insight and context. The letter in its entirety is reprinted below.

Yesterday two staff members at CEHS received an email from a person claiming to be from Dunsmuir, California. Somebody with no connection to this school. Who has never set foot in it.

The email was titled “Remove you he Of-fenders.” It started:

“Whoever is responsible (every single one of you) for this ridiculously biased B.S. should removed now….and forevermore. That includes YOU.

“Idiots. Disgusting.”

Yesterday I received an anonymous email titled “Your paternalism misogyny is show-ing, sir…”

Yesterday, two secretaries calmly handled separate calls from the same ranting gentleman from western New York state. Who concluded his tirade by saying he was think-ing of driving to CEHS. I referred that one to the police. Along with one other.

This has to stop. On September 16, the tenth day of our new school year, three of our students who were well motivated, with good intentions, made a really bad choice. They posted notes in two of our bathrooms claiming there is a “rapist” in CEHS.

And here’s where the heroes of this story, as far as I’m concerned, step in: the students who brought word of these notes to us within minutes of their posting. They were alarmed by what the notes said. They knew posting notes in the bathroom was the wrong way to

Hundred participate in student rally of support at CEHS

A rally organized by students on Friday, Oct. 11 at Cape Elizabeth High School drew hundreds of participants, primarily students but also faculty, staff and administrators.

According to a joint statement by three of those student organizers, namely Olivia Cochran, Max Patterson and Sabine Spier, the event was called “a Unity Rally. It is not a protest, and not a walkout from the school or the faculty.”

The statement went on to say that, “This rally was put together on Wednesday morn-ing by a group of about seven students. From here, the group just continued to grow as more people wanted to become involved. The purpose of the rally is to stand in soli-darity, showing each other, students and staff, showing the community, and showing the world that everyone at CEHS supports survivors.”

The student statement said, “This rally had seven main points that were strongly emphasized. As students and staff, together, we stand for:

• supporting survivors
• creating and fostering a safe and support-ive community for all
• standing to better our school and society
• recognizing that students’ voices can change cultural patterns
• acknowledging the hardworking indi-viduals in and around our school
• keeping these conversations going; ceaseless support
• growing through our differences.”

The students concluded with, “We want people to know that this school has so many hardworking and strong people in it. We have amazing teachers, amazing counselors, we have an amazing principal and vice prin-cipal. But most importantly, we have amaz-ing students who care about and support each other. We would also like to let people know that the conversations will not end here, this is just the beginning and change is happening.”

CEHS students organized a rally held on Friday, Oct. 11 to show support for survivors.

Three candidates vie for two open seats on Town Council

By Kevin St. Jarre

Incumbents Caitlin Jordan and Penelope Jordan are running to retain their seats, while challenger Aaron Mosher looks to bring a fresh face to the Cape Elizabeth Town Council. Each candidate was asked identical questions, and their responses are printed below. The order is alphabetical by candidate last name, and then first initial.

Caitlin Jordan, incumbent

I am seeking re-election because I love the town of Cape Elizabeth. I feel like our town holds many attributes that are slowly disappearing from our surrounding commu-nities as, “more bigger, more better” move in elsewhere, I strongly feel Cape Elizabeth needs to hold on to history and small town living.

I do not usually set out with an agenda to complete while I am serving on the council. My agenda is to handle the issues that arise, and make the best most informed decision I can that I feel is in the best interest of the town.

This past budget session seemed to

It’s time for pumpkin season!

By Tina Fischer

Pumpkins for pickin’ at Jordan’s Farm

Cape farms have grown oodles of orange orbs for us this season, with which we can decorate and which we can eat too - yes, pumpkins are tasty for humans as well as for the chipmunks and squirrels who attack your jack-o-lanterns!

Both Jordan’s Farm and Alewive’s Brook Farm grow many varieties; the smaller ones are known as “pie pumpkins” but many shapes and sizes are ideal for fall cooking. Roasting pumpkin seeds is a fun, if sticky, autumn tradition.

Alewive’s Brook Farm celebrates the sea-son with its annual “Pumpkin Patch by the Sea,” every weekend in October. Caitlin Jord-an and family have created a collection of games and challenges at the farm, and cus-tomers are invited to participate Saturday and Sunday, 9 a.m. to 7 p.m. Activities include

Some of us who live on Kettle Cove Road are not as excited about the proposed new access road being built at Kettle Cove as many Town officials seem to be. Faced with ever increasing traffic, often speeding from dawn to after sunset on many days, as well as a dramatic increase in illegal beach parking, we don’t believe access is an issue. Vehicles of all makes and models easily negotiate the existing ramp, and more and more drivers realize they can park illegally on the beach with impunity because both the State and Town lack resources to enforce the existing parking ordinances. Before precious funds are expended on what may be an unnecessary new road, which at present would only exacerbate an already unmanaged situation, a broader conversation about our neighborhood needs to take place that deals with more than just the issues addressed by the 2018 Harbor Committee report.

In addition to the impact of traffic on the neighbor and State park, part of the conversation should be around the existing sea wall/barrier protecting the road. Rising sea levels and tides have already had a damaging effect on part of the wall. If failure occurs there and the road is impacted, then there truly would be an access issue.

Then and Now: "Double, double, toil and trouble..."

By Jim Rove

Unless you happen to be Glinda, the Good Witch of the South, I suppose there is never an ideal time or place to be accused of being a witch. Certainly 17th century New England wouldn't qualify. The hysteria that gripped the heavily Puritan Massachusetts Bay Colony saw many citizens accused, well over 100 arrested, and 19 executed at the infamous Salem Witch Trials alone. Oftentimes these indictments stemmed from the simple "crime" of being unpopular.

Two incidents involved clergymen who had at least loose ties with Cape Elizabeth.

In 1659, a Puritan named John Thorpe was hired to minister to settlers at modest Black Point (Scarborough). He lived there with the Bayley family. Soon, it became obvious that Reverend Thorpe was not as holy as might be expected for a man of the cloth. His most glaring deficiencies were apparently alcoholism, profanity, and a generally foul disposition. He was evicted from his lodging, largely due to the complaints and testimony of Mrs. Bayley.

Thorpe relocated to Spurwink (southern Cape Elizabeth), where he and his wife, Moody Bayley, would be traveling to Casco (today's Portland) on a particular day. Thorpe arranged for his wagonmen to meet him along the woman's route. Per his plan, he appeared at the barbecue scene just as she passed and loudly declared that the dead bovine and ensuing flames were the certain result of Cape Elizabeth witchcraft.

At trial, Rev. Robert Jordan (progenitor of Cape Elizabeth's extensive Jordan family) came to her rescue. Jordan successfully argued that the cow had died from the apparent alcoholism, profanity, and a generally foul disposition. He was evicted from his lodging, largely due to the complaints and testimony of Mrs. Bayley.

The Cape Elizabeth Historical Preservation Society will meet on Monday, Nov. 4, at 7 p.m. in the Community Center located at 345 Ocean House Road.

The program will feature Katherine Rhoda, musician/folk singer/historian. Rhoda is well known in the world of vintage folk. She performed at the 2004 Cape Elizabeth Folk Festival and will be a featured performer at the 2005 Cape Elizabeth Folk Festival.

The data gathered includes the number of vehicles traveling on a road during a given time period and the speed of the vehicles during those given time periods. This data is available instantly and will help the department to efficiently target problem areas, making our community safer for residents, pedestrians, bicyclists and drivers.

The trailer is compact and can be easily moved from location to location. It is powered by batteries that are maintained by a solar panel. Additionally, the trailer has a message board that can deliver important information about road closures due to weather, emergencies, or planned events.

If you are concerned about speeding vehicles in your neighborhood, and would like to see the radar trailer deployed there, please contact Officer Darin Estes at darin.estes@capeelizabeth.org.

A list of roads currently scheduled for the radar trailer include: Oakhurst Road, Two Lights Road, Broad Cove Road, Eastman Road, Sawyer Road, Spurwink Avenue, Scott Dyer Road, Fowler Road, Shore Road, Trundy Road, Kettle Road, Pleasant Avenue and Hunts Point Road.
News from the Cape Elizabeth School Board

By Hope Straw and Susanna Masselle Hubbs

It’s been a very full month since the last newsletter. Recent events associated with Cape Elizabeth High School have, understandably, eclipsed so many positive ones. To name a few, the opening of the newFund Cove Playground and Outdoor Learning Center; the continued planting of tulip bulbs in support of the Yellow Tulip Project, the Thompson Family Mental Health Initiative and the CEMS “You Will Be Found” campaign; a collaborative “Unity Rally” organized by CEHS administration and students in support of survivors of sexual assault; as well as the completion of the CESD application for the Maine Department of Education’s School Revolving Renovation Fund (SRF). We have so much to be proud of and grateful for must try to keep in the balance during times of difficulty.

On October 8 the School Board provided a statement regarding recent student concerns and news articles about sexual harassment and assault allegations at CEHS. The most crucial information we conveyed is that student safety and well-being is our greatest priority. The School Board values and strives for safety above all else. Secondly, after extensive discussions with administrators and review of available facts, the School Board is satisfied that administration adhered to policy with great sensitivity. We acknowledge that not all students agree with our conclusion and therefore, remain committed to working together so that all students feel heard, safe, and respected.

Our role as a School Board is to uphold policy while doing all we can to keep our students safe and supported. In any situation involving allegations of sexual assault, the administration does its best to respect the rights of both the accuser and the accused, to investigate the allegations as thoroughly as possible and to take prompt remedial action where warranted. Sometimes, it is impossible to come to a definitive conclusion about what did or did not happen, particularly when the event took place off school grounds and outside of school hours. However, we expect that the administration will take whatever steps are necessary to ensure that any students who feel violated are supported and ask that the community respect and trust the process.

The Policy Committee will continue discussions surrounding procedures Student Discrimination and Harassment Complaint Procedure (AACA-R) and Child Abuse and Neglect Reporting (JLF-R) at the next meeting on October 22 at 3:00 p.m. in the Jordan Conference Room at Town Hall. As always, the public is welcome to attend.

As mentioned, it has been a very full month. The School Board held their annual retreat on September 24 at the Pupwoodock Club. Typically, these retreats focus on developing annual School Board goals. However, with the successful completion of the Futures Search in March of 2019, the School Board turned their attention to refining the goals identified from the data collected from the Future Search process. Over one hundred community members, staff, and students contributed to the process of identifying the goal areas considered most important to include in the school department’s five-year Strategic Plan.

At the October 8 Regular Business Meeting, the School Board adopted the following Cape Elizabeth School Department Goals for the 2020 - 2025 Strategic Plan.

1. Support a new Strategic Plan.
2. Continue the collaborative and proactive budget developmental process that includes stakeholders such as the town council and community members.
3. Consider the findings of the Facilities Study, take into consideration the recommendations of the Building Committee and make strategic investments which modernize and repair aging school buildings and grounds as well as maximize student learning and safety.
4. Cultivate and leverage community involvement with the Cape Elizabeth School Department.

As always, recordings of all School Board Regular Business Meetings are available at the CETFV website and CESD website.

With ongoing support of one of these goals, the Finance Sub-Committee met again on Wednesday, October 9. Perry Schwarz, Director of Facilities and Transportation, joined the meeting to discuss the need for reviewing the operating, maintenance, and organizational structure of this department. Under a “one-town concept,” the ability to provide service and track operating costs becomes more complicated. The sub-committee agreed to support a comprehensive evaluation of the department’s responsibilities to both the town and the schools.

In a separate meeting on the same day superintendent Dr. Wolfrom, school board chair Susanna Masselle Hubbs and vice chairs Heather Altvitzen and Kimberly Carr met with town manager, Matthew Majocha, and town clerk Debra Lane, to discuss the pros and cons of holding elections within the Cape Elizabeth High School. From the perspective of the town clerk, holding elections at the high school is currently the only viable option in which legal requirements of polling locations are met. While schools are not required to closed, the town of Cape Elizabeth has routinely requested that our schools be closed during the November elections in order to facilitate a safe and accessible voting process for both students and community members. The school department has already accommodated this request — as it is safest for our students. The problem occurs during primaries and local elections, when the numbers are smaller, but the students are still in session.

Due to the school’s association with Portland Arts & Technical High School, sending schools must not have more than five dissimilar school days. This presents a significant scheduling challenge in general and poses a significant problem at CEHS as the school remains open to the voters. As a result, the town and school department are actively pursuing alternatives and/or modifications that will maintain student safety when school is in session. During the upcoming 2019 November elections, additional local law enforcement officers will be stationed near polling sites and barriers installed within the school in order to run a "dress rehearsal" in preparation for future elections which coincide with a regular school day.

Policies: The policy committee met on Sept. 24 to review updates to the following policies: AC – Non-Discrimination/Equal Opportunity and Affirmative Action
ACA – Harassment and Sexual Harassment of Students
ACAB – Harassment and Sexual Harassment of School Employees
ACAD – Hazing – with the new policy added the final clause at the end of the second paragraph.

Two candidates for Cape Elizabeth School Board

By Kevin St. jarre

There are two people running for the two seats on the Cape Elizabeth School Board. One, Kimberly Carr, is an incumbent, and the other is Phillip Saucier, hoping to join the body and fill the seat being vacated by Chair Susana Measelle Hubbs.

Kimberly Carr

Why are you seeking to be reelected to the School Board? What are a couple of things you really feel need to be accomplished during the term?

I am seeking a second three-year term on the school board. I have five children in our system: two in high school, two in middle school and my youngest just started kindergarten at Pond Cove. I have a long-term interest in the success of our schools. Like so many in our town, the excellent school system was a driving force in our decision to move to Cape Elizabeth. I value service and have been honored to be part of the school board in our district.

We had a lot of changes and accomplishments in my first term and I think it is important to be able to offer consistency for both the school board and the community. If re-elected I would like to continue to work with town council to make improvements in the budget process. I will also continue to enhance communication within the school and throughout the community. Finally I will strongly support maintaining and upgrading our facilities.

What are your thoughts on Performance Based Education in Maine schools, and Cape Elizabeth School Department continuing with adoption of PBE despite Maine law being changed and no longer requiring schools to comply?

I believe that if well executed, Proficiency Based Education (PBE) can be very useful for students and educators alike. Our district took a practical approach to PBE. We have been slow and methodical about implementing PBE and have been constantly assessing if we are meeting the best interests of our students.

It is often said that students in Cape Elizabeth schools are under too much pressure or stress. How do you feel about this?

The physical, academic and emotional well being of all of our students is a top priority. Balancing homework and expectations with undue stress and anxiety must continually be assessed. It is vital that both the school board and administrators always remain aware of this. We have a high performing school system, which includes academics, athletics & the arts. In order to maintain this, it is always important for us to set reasonable expectations that both support a healthy learning environment and also continue to challenge our students.

Is there anything within Cape schools that you feel must be changed, or at least closely examined?

We are so fortunate in Cape Elizabeth to have a community that is supportive and engaged. Last year I participated in the Needs Assessment Committee. This was a large committee comprised of a variety of people who worked in or attended the schools or lived in the community. I was so appreciative of the level of caring and interest of all committee members. After several meetings and tours of our facilities, the committee recommended that a needs assessment of our facilities be added to the budget. This assessment has been taking place. I believe we must closely examine and pursue the recommended upgrades. As the towns greatest asset, I believe we need to maintain our facilities and make improvements to support excellence in academics, arts and athletics.

Phillip Saucier

Why are you seeking to be elected to the School Board? What are a couple of things you really feel need to be accomplished during the term?

I am seeking a second three-year term on the Cape Elizabeth School Board. I have two young children - our son is in first grade at Pond Cove and our daughter will be in kindergarten next fall - both of whom will learn and grow up in this community. We feel lucky that our children will have an opportunity to be educated in the Cape Elizabeth school system with such wonderful teachers - but we should not be complacent. Cape’s strong education system is the product of a lot of dedication and effort by volunteers, educators, administrators, board members, and others. I think it is important to participate and help in any way I can, and while I have a lot to learn, if elected to the School Board I will work hard to understand the facts, listen and work with all in reaching decisions grounded in what is best for Cape schools. I was particularly motivated to run for the school board this term because of the decisions and opportunities we will soon have about the future of our school facilities.

I look forward to reviewing the upcoming facility needs assessment and how we can best provide a supportive physical environment for our students.

What are your thoughts on Performance Based Education in Maine schools, and Cape Elizabeth School Department continuing with adoption of PBE despite Maine law being changed and no longer requiring schools to comply?

The Cape Elizabeth School Department underwent a thoughtful and deliberative process to implement proficiency-based education over the last several years - and invested significant time and energy to make sure that implementation was incremental and tailored to our students. I support continuing with this approach at this time - with ongoing review and monitoring for its effectiveness. Most importantly we should listen to our teachers and provide sufficient resources - in particular.

They have every right to do that. Any experienced school administrator would—indeed, every school in the country has had similar experiences.

In those situations, we support both students as the claims work themselves through the law, evidence-gathering process. We take steps to make sure both students feel safe and supported. In this case, the girl and her family ultimately decided, before that process was complete, to pursue the case no further. That is their choice. It should be honored. Even though the legal process is over, we continue to monitor this situation to be sure our student feels safe and supported.

At the beginning of our investigation, we checked in with the girl involved in the legal complaint situation. She said she feels safe and supported in CEHS. Unfortunately, as this story evolved, I’m sorry to say, we had to disrupt her school day about four more times for additional followup questions. At each subsequent check-in, she reports feeling safe. She feels supported. She wants to come to school to learn and to grow in her classes and to enjoy the day to day experiences with her friends.

And as we conducted those 47 interviews, we uncovered rumors about two other alleged situations involving a CEHS student who was the clearly intended target of the sticky note messages. There was a rumor of a video suppessedly showing horrifying images. Within hours, through student assistance, we got acces to two, ten-second Snapchat videos that were the basis of the rumors. These students, in my mind, were the next group of heroes in this situation—students who trusted us with the videos. The videos did not show what the rumor mill said they showed. Not even close. Not surprising.

Rumor mills in high schools are often wrong. What adult isn’t familiar with that reality from our own high school experiences? We tracked down the girls in the videos, young women now, who never attended CEHS. They explained what was happening in the videos. Again, the rumors were not true.

Through our investigation, another rumor surfaced based on an alleged incident following one of our recent proms. We checked with the student who was the alleged victim according to that rumor. There was no truth to the rumor, she said. Unfortunately, as this investigation evolved, we had to check in with this student, too, multiple additional times, for further followup. On each occasion, she says she feels safe in CEHS and supported. She just wants to be in school, participate on her teams, enjoy her friends, and learn.

During most of this investigation, the young man who was the target of the sticky notes stayed away from school—he missed a total of eight days of school. He felt unsafe. His family said this felt like bullying and asked to look into that. That is their right.

The student is back now. He’s had many CEHS classmates who have reached out to and supported him—an increasing number, in fact, as this story about CEHS has gained national traction.

This has been a challenging and sometime frustrating three weeks at CEHS. So let me describe the CEHS I know:

• Our students are caring, respectful, hard-working, and thoughtful.
• We serve families who care deeply about education and entrust us with their respective sons and daughters.
• The teachers at CEHS care deeply about the students in their classes. For the last three weeks, they have been walking on egg shells, wondering about their school, what they can say, and worried that what they say could be misinterpreted.
• The secretaries and support staff care deeply. They know our students by name. In many cases they know their parents, their brothers, and sisters.
• We have three caring counselors in our school counseling department who don’t deserve to be called “Idiots. Disgusting” by people in Dunsmuir, California, or anytime else, who have no idea what they’re talking about.

CEHS is blessed with two skilled social workers who take their jobs incredibly serisouly. They do hard work with grace and passion to support our students. They come in on weekends and summer days when students with whom they are working are in need.

• I have an Assistant Principal, Nate Car-Penter, who cares so deeply about young people that he wears his heart on his sleeve. He’s had family members contact him based on the recent publicity, sharing questions that they are hearing from others wondering about the kind of school we are.

In the spring of 2015, a girl in my advisory group came to me with a social worker who had been supporting her. She knew I cared about her. She knew the social worker cared about her.

She was the victim of a sexual assault, she told me. Her idea, supported by the social worker, was for CEHS to support a full day of sexual assault and consent training for all of our juniors and seniors. Throughout the following year, a dedicated group of students, staff, and community members worked alongside this young lady to organize our first all-day SAAF (Sexual Assault AWAREness For Everyone) event. This was a year before the MeToo movement hit the national airwaves.

In 2018, we held our second such event. Next spring we’ll hold our third. We have always supported and cared about our students—all our students—and will continue to do so.

We always have things to learn and do better at CEHS. That’s true for me. In the past few months, I’ve learned a lot about the tricky nuances of Title IX, Maine’s mandated reporting requirement that differs depending on whether the abuser is a member of the young person’s family or not, and about the complicated intersections between federal and state law surrounding mandated reporting. I have done and will do my job better as a result of the events of last spring and the past four weeks.

Over the next few weeks, as the recent national attention to CEHS fades, we will con-continue to go about our jobs of educating students, staff, and parents about all of these topics related to sexual assault. That’s important work. We take it seriously. We all can learn and grow from this. That is what CEHS is about.

The students who posted the sticky notes made a bad choice even though their intentions were good. People were hurt by those bad choices.

The students regret their choices, I’m sure. They will learn. We don’t expect perfection of our students. We freely give second chances.

When any student returns from suspension, a consequence we rarely assign, we welcome them back. Their slate is clean. When the students become seniors, provided that they have good records since then, they can request that the record of a one and only suspenion be expunged. We’ve had that process in place for years.

To the adults, including adults in the media, who are giving credence to the sticky note assertions made with zero support in any findings following a school or legal investigatory process, shame on you. You are passing along rumors as if they were established fact. They are not.

If there are any parents who want to learn more about this situation, we will have opportunities for that over the next few weeks.

If there are parents who wish to meet with Mr. Carpenter or me in the meantime, give us a call. We’d be happy to answer your questions. We’ll walk you around the school, and you can see for yourself what the vibe is in the hallways of CEHS.

And to the author of the emails from Dunsmuir, California, I will pass along an offer to Mr. Carpenter and I make on a regular basis to students, parents, community members, and visitors: our doors are open to you, come in on for a visit.

I am proud to be CEHS’s principal. I am proud of the student heroes who came to us and shared with us. I have every confidence we will grow as staff, students, and a com-

especially smoothly. If you agree, why do you think that is?
I do agree that it went smoothly, Matt S was well prepared, as were the department heads in determining the priorities for the town and asking for little more than what they needed. As did the school, and while everyone wants a small to little budget increase we also have to remember the many things each year that aren’t being asked for funded that continue to be left off the table that perhaps need to be added to the discussion even if it means a less smooth process.

What is something you really think Cape Elizabeth is missing?
There really isn’t anything that is missing; we are so fortunate to live where we do, we have the small town life, the beaches, the open space, the quaint town stores and restaurants. And if you want more you only need to drive a few minutes and the rest of the world is at your fingertips in South Portland and Portland, or a mere two hours and all of Boston is there. There is nothing more needed in town.

What would you say to dog owners who feel that off-leash spaces around Cape Elizabeth, which existed for many years, seem to be shrinking or disappearing altogether?
I would say they need to expand where they take their dogs, we just redid the list of places in town and asking for little more than what they need to be done, if anything?

Can we fund it.
I am a huge supporter of property rights, and if someone owns a piece of property that is their decision to build what they want within the current ordinance and land use. Everyone should have the opportunity to live in Cape Elizabeth.

In your view, how are short term rentals (e.g. AirBnb, VRBO, etc.) affecting our community?
Short term rentals are affecting neighbor and communities by changing the feel and sense of community to those that are living in the neighborhood. While I believe property owners have the right to use their property as they see fit, there is also a need to balance the use of short term rentals so not to have a devastating impact on the neighborhoods.

Is there anything you would like to add that we have not asked?
Cape Elizabeth is a gem that needs to be protected and people reminded of the life that we are preserving before it is gone forever. And the reality is that protection and our way of life here in Cape Elizabeth comes at a cost one way or another, but to those who truly appreciate it and understand it, know its worth.

Penny Jordan, incumbent

Why are you seeking to be reelected to the Town Council?
I am a lifelong resident of Cape Elizabeth and I love my town; its heritage and what it is today. While growing up I watched and listened as my father, Bill Jordan, volunteered his time to help create the town people are drawn to today. Serving on the council has reinforced for me that as Cape Elizabeth continues to evolve it is imperative that the voice of a business owner, farmer and longtime resident is present.

What is a couple of things you really feel need to be accomplished during the term?
Short-term rentals – I believe we need to step back and look at what we have learned. We need to look at the impact short-term rentals are having on our neighborhoods. This issue has many dimensions and I believe we need to dig in, understand and make decisions that work for our town and citizens.

Cape Elizabeth’s Comprehensive Plan – I was involved in the committee and I feel we did some great work. I want to help shepherd the plan as it moves forward, and not just work on a town center where people stop versus drive to the next town?

This past budget session seemed to go especially smoothly. If you agree, why do you think that is?
I believe you are alluding to the fact in past years there seemed to be contention between the Town Council and School Board and it didn’t seem to be present this past budget season. I attribute this to several things:

• The work up front by the Town Council and School Board to discuss working together, understanding our roles and building a sense of trust.
• The process defined by the Superintendent and School Board was well thought out, transparent and demonstrated commitment to a fiscally responsible and sound budget that focused on all students.
• A strong sense that we are all working to do the best for our town – it was a good process with a good outcome.

What is something you really think Cape Elizabeth is missing?
A water slide – just kidding! Know we have plans for our town center and I think there is real opportunity here to create more places for people to gather and make connections. How do we create a town center where people stop versus drive to the next town?

This was discussed a great deal during the development of the Comprehensive Plan.

What would you say to dog owners who feel that off-leash spaces around Cape Elizabeth, which existed for many years, seem to be shrinking or disappearing altogether?
There are a lot of areas in Cape Elizabeth where dogs can be off leash. What I keep hearing from people is that there are NOT a lot of options in accessing those areas (especially in the winter), I think the fact we have an aging population and they want to have dogs then we need to figure out a way to create places where the dogs can run and the people can socialize. I understand it when people say that the dog owners become friends and that the dogs get their exercise – we need to find places to make that happen.

How have rising property values impacted taxpayers, and what should or can be done, if anything?
I think the Senior Tax Relief program demonstrates that we understand how tax increases can impact our seniors that want to stay in their homes. I also feel that we need to be vigilant about spending and know that the budgets put forward represent what is needed for the town (not the wants).

What is your position on the construction of a town center and asking for little more than what they need to be done, if anything?

work for the neighborhoods and homeowners in Cape Elizabeth.

Is there anything you would like to add that we have not asked?
My family has owned Jordan’s Farm for generations and our farm contributes to the rural character that draws so many people to our town. I want to continue to contribute my time and energy to Cape Elizabeth’s future. I feel I can be effective because I bring energy and passion to whatever I do. I listen, gather information and strive to make informed decisions. As a business owner, I know the importance of investing dollars wisely. I understand the need to create an infrastructure that can endure and the need to make trade-offs, particularly when dollars are in short supply. As a member of the Town Council, I will serve all citizens.

Aaron Mosher, challenger

Why are you seeking the be elected to the Town Council? What are a couple of things you really feel need to be accomplished during the term?
I’ve lived in town for almost (and only!) 18 years - I discovered Cape through a picnic at the Fort with friends on a gorgeous July day, and then a couple of years later mountain biking the town’s Greenbelt trails. Once we moved here, we fell in love with the town and its people.

My family is moving through its phases of life here - childless couple, dog, newborn, another newborn, pre-school, Pond Cove, Middle School, another dog, High School, and, down the road, empty nesters. This lets me see how the town government impacts different groups of residents at different times in their lives. I will bring deep curiosity, a desire to learn, and energy to the Council.

In this upcoming term, we’ll need to plan for investment in our school infrastructure, work toward resolving conflicts around shore access and the Greenbelt, and keep the town running as efficiently as we can.

This past budget session seemed to go especially smoothly. If you agree, why do you think that is?
Each year we have incredible pressures on the finances of our town - state education aid is always under attack, and we are forced to scramble to adjust to it. Our Council and the town administration, along with the school department, have done an admirable job over the years rolling with the punches.

Communication, openness, a realistic attitude, creative thinking, and appreciation of the citizenry help our elected officials and town staff be good stewards of the town’s government.

What is your position on the balance between the benefits and challenges of tourism in Cape Elizabeth?
We live in a beautiful town - and we’re proud to share it with the world. But, we don’t want to endanger that beauty and impact our own enjoyment of it. We’re on a path to make the Fort less dependent on our dog owners and their advocacy groups.

A broad look at the work of the CEMS counseling team

By Kim Sturgeon

This is my 20th year as part of the Cape Elizabeth Middle School’s (CEMS) team of counselors and social workers, currently comprised of two full time counselors and two part time social workers. Each of us meet with individuals and small groups of students. We also provide classroom lessons to all students on topics such as bullying prevention, peer pressure, goal setting, decision-making, friendship skills and cyber-safety. We have been trained in suicide prevention and implement lessons around stress management and suicide prevention to students understand stress, develop coping strategies for dealing with stress in their lives, understand anxiety and depression. This year 7th & 8th grade students will learn about suicide and steps to reduce risks for themselves and others.

Over the past few years, and continuing this year, we coordinate with regional agencies to bring outside experts into the classroom. Sexual Assault Response Services of Southern Maine (SARSSM) provides lessons on Cyber Harassment Prevention, Sexual Harassment Prevention, and Gender Stereotypes. The Young Adult Abuse Prevention Program (YAAPP) presented lessons to 7th & 8th grade students last year and will be returning this year. Their programming focuses on what healthy and unhealthy dating behaviors look like, and who to reach out to for extra support. They also empower students to build healthy relationships by helping them identify, communicate, and respect their own and their partner’s boundaries.

In 2014 Steve Wessler, a human rights educator, trainer and advocate trained a team of about fifteen staff members from the Cape Elizabeth Middle and High Schools; including administrators, classroom teachers and counselors. Our Cape Elizabeth team then facilitated workshops for more than 100 students at each school teaching practical skills for intervening at the earliest levels of bias, degrading language, harassment, and bullying. Last fall every 7th and 8th grade student participated in three classroom lessons based on Wessler’s work. Students shared their experiences of hurtful language and voiced concerns about the culture of CEMS. This work needs to continue.

The CEMS counseling team wrote a Cape Elizabeth Education Foundation (CEEF) grant for the 2018/19 cycle to bring two more organizations to our school. This year, 7th & 8th grade students will participate in a four-lesson workshop facilitated by Maine Boys to Men (MB2M) and Hardy Girls/ Healthy Women (HGHW). The MB2M’s “Reducing Sexism and Violence Program” empowers students to play a central role in ending gender-based harassment, abuse, and violence. HGHW provides girls with knowledge and skills to gain more control over their lives and become change catalysts in their communities. They will examine society’s expectations of girls and how those negative themes can be internalized. This project is made possible through the generous support of donors to CEEF.

Early adolescence (age 10-13) is the period of fastest human growth outside of infancy. Adolescence is a wildly transformative period that involves profound physical, psychological, emotional and social growth. Their brains act like sponges — learning at a fast pace. The messages coming at them are both positive and negative, sometimes in an overwhelming manner. Social media is entrenched in our world, and students need instruction on how to navigate it and not feel the need to be “on” 24/7. We’re seeing positive effects of our programming. Students continue to support one another through tough times, now with tools on how to do this safely and effectively. Students also see the members of our counseling team as resources who can offer advice and guidance.

Cape Elizabeth birding report

By E. Brooks Bornhoff

This is the time of the year that a wide variety of birds are still winging their way south. During the first two weeks of October, the fall migration of shorebirds continues as many of the birds that are the eastern forests, boreal birds, grassland birds, waterfowl and raptors. They are guided by their internal GPS witch in large part is developed as young imprint on the angles of the sun and stars helping orient them on such extraordinary journeys.

As for noteworthy mentions, it sure has been a great fall for Yellow-bellied Sapsuckers spotting. In fact, it’s the best fall in the last four years according to my records. On Oct. 3, Oct. 5 and Oct. 9 I saw upwards of five of these medium sized woodpeckers in orchard trees and maple trees. This nifty bird excaves neat rows of shallow holes called sapwells and laps up the leaking sap and any trapped insects with its crafty, brush-tipped tongue. These woodpeckers are the only fully migratory woodpecker in eastern North America. Interestingly, in boreal forests north of here the Ruby-throated Hummingbirds rely so much on woodpeckers sapwells that they time their spring migration with the arrival of sapwells.

Additionally, I had a Common Raven and an Eastern Phoebe (flycatcher) calling along Shore Road on Oct. 5. On time are the Golden-crowned Kinglets that are starting to creep through Cape in good numbers this year. Soon to be followed by Ruby-crowned cousins. These tiny dainty birds will mostly migrate through Cape Elizabeth, however some birds do winter in our woods. Additionally, I saw a Tennessee Warbler and a Nashville Warbler travelling together in the Greenbelt swath of land and small pond area just up from the boat rack area at Great Pond. This is a dynastic birthing hot spot.

To our delight, on Oct. 7 a male Black-throated Blue Warbler showed up on the backyard suet. This is the only Black-throated Blue I have seen this far and every year I feel like I see less and less of them. This is a true warbler of the woods preferring densely shaded second growth forests (unknown if nesting in Cape). Males have year-round feather coloring that is more striking than it is bright. It has sharply contrasting black and white areas, and a rich darkish blue back. As an ambassador to birds I would not be doing my duty if I did not mention a real wake up of a study just published by seven institutions, including the Smithsonian Migratory Bird Center and the Cornell Lab of Ornithology. The study discovered that North America has lost 2.9 billion birds in the last 50 years. The scale of loss that this study brings to bear is unlike anything recorded in modern natural history. Over the last five decades we have lost 17% of the eastern forest birds. Both Blue-jays and Grosbeaks have declined 25% and Baltimore Orioles by a whopping 31%. Additionally, 33% of boreal forest birds have been lost, 37% of shorebirds and grassland bird populations like the Bobolink (which nests in Maine) are down by over 50% across their entire respective populations. Now for the good news, the study also found that waterfowl and raptor populations (hatchlings, owls fall under this category as well) populations are...
Lessons at Cape Ledge Farm are about horseback riding and so much more
By Tina Fischer

Cape Ledge Farm is offering a range of horseback riding lessons and “horse therapy” opportunities this fall and winter for all ages, including a special session for veterans. The therapeutic riding program, called “Horses for Service,” is designed for military vets and their families, and “It’s not all about getting on the horse,” according to farm co-owner Brittany Petisinger.

“It’s therapy through nonverbal communication around horses. Our trainer Rachel Bernstein focuses on creating a bond with the horse.”

Zack Petisinger notes, “Rachel is PATHS certified and has taught veterans for many years. She’s also worked directly with patients who had traumatic brain injuries. The focus of the lessons for veterans is to concentrate on the horse while grooming and learning natural horsemanship and taking their minds off traumatic experiences. Lessons can be for veterans and their families, spouses, and friends. “We have some great horses who pick up on people’s emotions and are trained in natural horsemanship. The horses really respond to the person they’re working with.”

“The barn is a place where veterans can come to relax,” Brittany adds. “My husband Zack is in the Navy; it’s really important to him to start this new venture. He knows a lot of vets who may be interested. People can book with Rachel on our website, and we’re offering a military discount.”

Bernstein is also running a program with the nearby Aucocisco School, focusing on helping students with sensory processing challenges. “Students have been coming to the farm four times a week for an hour to spend time with and groom the horses,” Zack adds. “And this is where Rachel’s experience is so important. The barn is a quiet place where students can feel comfortable without loud noises and distractions and just focus on the horse. Cape Ledge also offers private and group lessons for riders of all abilities and ages - the youngest are five years old - and the Petisingers are accepting sign-ups for their winter Farm Camp, scheduled for the last week in December. Camp is geared toward children in kindergarten through eighth grade and will include, along with riding, horsemanship education, crafts, goat yoga and farm chores. More details about all lesson and camp programs are at capeledgefarm.com.

up by 50% and 200% respectively. This is due to dedicated conservation funding and focused polices like the Endangered Species Act that is being threatened by the current administration in Washington. In our everyday lives we can think harder about making our windows safer, keeping all cats indoors and avoiding the use of pesticides whenever possible. Also consider recording bird sightings on Cornell Lab of Ornithology’s eBird, org. Birders are the eyes and ears that contribute the data that allow scientists to monitor the health of bird populations.

Password managers

One of the best ways to protect your online information is to use strong, unique passwords for each password-protected website you use. But keeping track of all of these passwords is not easy. One solution is to use a password manager – a software program that creates, stores and retrieves strong and unique passwords for you. Do some research to find an option that best suits your needs and budget.

Be a fraud fighter! If you can spot a scam, you can stop a scam.

1D theft: what to do next

We take a lot of precautions to protect our personal information, but we’re not the only people responsible for our data. So many different entities have our personal information it’s hard to keep track of. Our banks, health providers, email TV and Internet provider, retailers and more all have our data and many of them have been hacked. The reality is that most Americans have already had their identity compromised. So what can we do to protect ourselves after the fact?

Here are three steps to protecting yourself after your personal information has been stolen.

1) Sign up for credit monitoring that will alert you if someone tried to open an account in your name.

2) Place a security freeze on your credit to help stop identity thieves from opening new accounts in your name.

3) Establish online access to all of your bank accounts, credit cards and retirement accounts and check them frequently.

In commemoration of the Feast Day of St. Francis of Assisi (Oct. 4), pet owners gathered at St. Bartholomew Parish on Oct. 5 to have their dogs, cats and other beloved animals blessed. Fr. Innocent Okozi welcomed and blessed the pets, and refreshments were served following the service.
The committee considered edits to policies AC, ACA, and ACAB to include the addition of the term “gender identity and expression” to include coverage of this classification in the policies. Also in Policy ACA, the committee considered adding language to expand the parties who may investigate complaints to include any school administrator.

In the ACAD Hazing Policy, the current policy includes the statement that “Injurious hazing also includes any hazing activity that is expected of a student as a condition of joining or maintaining membership in a group that humiliates, degrades, abuses or endangers a student.” The committee considered the addition of the new clause “regardless of the student’s willingness to participate in the activity” to this provision.

At the October 8 Regular Business meeting the School Board reviewed the above policies. The revisions were presented as part of a first reading therefore no vote or action was taken. These policies will be reviewed again at the next policy committee meeting.

This fall School Board also plans to review Policies JLF - JLF-R - Child Abuse and Neglect Reporting, and JLF-R - Child Abuse and Neglect Reporting - Administrative Procedure, as well as a new policy JLF - Child Sexual Abuse Prevention and Response. Look for these policies on an upcoming policy committee agenda.

All policies are posted on the CESD website in the School Board section policy tab.

FUTURE DATES:
• Tuesday, October 22, Policy Committee, at 3:00 p.m. in the Jordan Conference Room.
• Tuesday, October 22, School Board Workshop, Needs Assessment Facilities Study & First Building Committee Meeting, 6:30 - 8:30 p.m., CESH Library.

Captoons: Hani'malloween in Cape Elizabeth
By Jeff Mandell

The Cape Elizabeth Education Foundation (CEEF) welcomed five new members to the Board of Directors in July: Greg Gordon, Jill Skrabalak, Mika Reynolds, Sheri Bragg and Kathy Kline. The new members are parents of students across all three Cape schools and bring fresh perspectives to a dedicated board. “CEEF works to support all of the schools in Cape, so it’s important our board represents that” noted CEEF Executive Director Liz McEvoy. “Our board reflects wide range of professional and volunteer experience that enhances the discussion around our grants.” CEEF’s sixteen member board evaluates grant applications during a fall and spring grant cycle, hearing innovative ideas from all three schools. Last year, CEEF awarded $96,842 to Cape schools, including an acupuncture experiential learning grant for CEMS, updates to the theatre and HUB collaborative space at CEHS, and a large impact grant for “Natureland” at Pond Cove. More information about CEEF’s grants and ways to be involved can be found at ceeef.us.

There is anything within Cape schools that you feel must be changed, or at least closely examined? I look forward to closely analyzing the upcoming facility needs assessment to see where and if our school facilities may need to be upgraded or renovated to provide the right space for learning. While it is important to spend our money wisely and with an eye to rising costs, it is equally important to ensure that we provide a safe and productive physical environment for our students.
